

Chapter 16

“A Million Hearts from Here”:
Japanese-Canadian Mothers and Daughters
And the Lessons of War
Pamela Sugiman

Questions for Critical Reading

1. How do official accounts of the war influence the three women’s remembering?
2. Consider the passages from Tamura’s short story. How do these passages match her grandmother’s remembering? How do they differ? What does this reveal about inter-generational remembering?
3. Sugiman only studies her own family in this article. What factors may influence other families to remember the internment differently?
4. This article does not use any traditional historical sources commonly accepted in the field. Can this article still be considered “history”? Why or why not?
